Conservation Comments
by Dr. B. E. Claybaugh, ABS Conservation Chairman

Ornamental Plant Germplasm Center.

I have recently been introduced to a new, US Government conservation program that will include both species and cultivar begonias. In recent correspondence with Ken Browne, Queensland Australia, I was told of a conservation program for begonias and other ornamental plants which is getting underway at Ohio State University (OSU). This program is being managed by Dr. David Tay, who is also from Queensland. Let me describe the background of this program and how the American Begonia Society can contribute.

The US Department of Agriculture currently maintains plant conservation programs at 24 state universities throughout the US. This is the US National Plant Germplasm System. These programs have centered on food crops, until 1999, when Ohio State University was selected to develop and implement a conservation program on ornamental plants. This program and facility is the only one of it's kind in the world. Since that time, the infrastructure has been built, and plans laid for conserving over 30 important genera of ornamental plants. The facilities at OSU include a 6,000 square foot office building, a 12,000 square foot greenhouse, two modern laboratories, extensive field plots, and an experienced staff of experts. The facility is known as The Ornamental Plant Germplasm Center. In their words, "The Ornamental Plant Germplasm Center (OPGC), located on the Columbus campus of The Ohio State University is a cooperative effort involving the University and the Agricultural Research Service of the US

Editor's Notes

To those whose letters I have not answered, please know that it is because we are still overwhelmed with our move and its related problems. I have written several columns telling everyone about our new environment and what is going on here, but these had to be deleted because of last minute items that came in and needed the space. Still I keep feeling that I have communicated these!

I'd like to use this column to tell you about hurricane messages. As most of you know we were far from the coast and had no problems other than high winds as it came inland west of us. Houston as well mostly escaped damage. I have heard from Cindy Moran in Baton Rouge whom many of you know; she fared well, but she sent me articles about the sad state of the New Orleans Botanical Garden. Its main problem now is just having enough income to survive (Pretty much the scene with all of Louisiana, I'm afraid.) You can find more info at www.nola.com. Baton Rouge and Shreveport were the only major Louisiana cities without major damage, but Baton Rouge is coping with its huge increase in population as a result of the ruin below in the state.

we would like to find samples of, either seed or silica dried plant material (flowers or buds are best for DNA extraction). We would like accessions collected from the wild if possible, but any will be useful. We will pass on information derived from the DNA analysis of the samples to the donors and acknowledge them in any publication.

In return for your help, I would be happy to write a short article on my planned work for your publication.

Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions.

Thank you in advance,

All begonias in Section Gireoudia are included in Nicola's list. She has a complete listing of these begonias which she will be happy to send you via email.

On B. handelii var handelii

In the Begonian of July/August 2007 I was very interested to read in Bill Claybaugh's article on B handelii var. handelii that only male flowering plants are being grown in U.S. I am growing this begonia which I was given a good number of years ago by Dorothy Miller. She had received her plant from Bob Cherry (I believe he returned from a Camellia collecting expedition in China with this treasure of the Begonia world). Our plants have only female flowers. Some years ago I sent a start to Kathy Goetz in Oregon maybe she still has it growing.

One fascinating piece of information that came from this contact was that the plants flowered at the same time even though one was in the Northern Hemisphere and the other in the South! Let's try to correct this! Our 9th Australian Convention could be an ideal opportunity. I'm open to suggestions.

Convention Hospitality

As a new participant working at a convention, I had to let you know that my husband Bob (bartender) in the hospitality room and myself, Shirlee Rapp, had a great time.

Over the years I've read so many names in the Begonian. It was great fun to finally put faces to the names I've read so much about.

It was nice to see so many that came such a long distance from Japan, England, the EAst coast to the West Coast.

I hope all who came to the hospitality room to chat and eat enjoyed themselves.

grows on rocks, on trunks or on soil nearly without compost. When it rains, the water goes down and does not stay on the roots.

To induce flowers, I use artificial light from September to April to provide 14 hours light each day (in the beginning, I didn't use artificial light and I didn't get blossoms); with that, it blooms very easily.

In cultivation it is the first yellow-flowered begonia to bloom, usually in April/May; the flowers are the largest ones of all these plants. Unfortunately, as you know, the begonias of sections Loasibegonia and Scutobegonia are usually not self-fertile. I brought back too little seed from my last trip to Gabon, but I did bring back some plants. They are other strains and I hope to pollinate them with the ones I grew before.

But it is easy to propagate it with leaves (cut the petiole about 1 or 2 long). I use live sphagnum. As I do for B. lyallii var. lyallii f. masoalensis, I put a leaf on the sphagnum and I spray! Preferably in spring. That's all! Usually we must wait for a start for several months. The begonia grower learns how to be patient …

By the way, good news: in my last

Privacy Policy

Your privacy and the privacy of all ABS members or of those who contact us is of the highest priority. This privacy and terms of use statement explains what information we gather from you, how it may be used by us and how it is protected. If you have any questions, please contact us.

If you are an ABS member or request information from ABS, we use the information you submit to fulfill your requests (such as sending informational materials, fulfilling your order or responding to specific inquiries). We also may use information for purposes of the Society including providing names of ABS members to those wishing to start a branch in the ABS or in connection with internal communications (such as invitations to events). If you do not want your information shared, let our membership chairman know by email or phone. This information is used for Society-related contacts only. We will not knowingly collect or use personal identifying information from children younger than 18 without parental consent. If knowledge of any information from any child younger 18 is collected, we will immediately delete such information.

If you are a member of ABS or submit material to the Begonian, your information may be published in the Begonian either in association with the published material or in reporting business of the society including the directory on the inside back cover. If you submit material in any form including letters, articles, and photographs, it is assumed that these are submitted for publication unless you specifically request that material not be published. Be aware that it is the policy of ABS not to copyright material in the Begonian or restrict its further use so long as credit is given as to source.

There is a privacy policy specific to our web page on our website at www.begonias.org.

We do not otherwise sell, rent, exchange or disclose our client lists or information about our web site users or our members, except to the limited extent necessary to protect the rights, property and safety of our Society, our members, or others or to comply with applicable law. In the event of dissolution of the Society, all member data will be destroyed.

Calling All Indoor Growers!

Growing begonias indoors, in cold climates, takes some special considerations. Amy Shonka, Topeka, KS, maintains this beautiful collection, which blooms profusely even in the dead of winter. Do you grow indoors? Send your indoors growings tips, challenges, and pictures to The Begonian - we'd love to hear how you grow your begonias! Photo by Amy Shonka

The Gesneriad Society
www.gesneriadsociety.org

Achimenes, Aeschynanthus, Chirita, Columnea, Drymonia, Episcia, Kohleria, Nematanthus, Petrocosmea, Sinningia, Streptocarpus... These and many other gesneriads are excellent plants for the greenhouse hobbyist.

Purchase our 56-page manual "How to Know and Grow Gesneriads" for US$10 postpaid anywhere, or join The Gesneriad Society for one year for US$25 in USA, US$30 elsewhere. Go to www.gesneriadsociety.org or send check or credit card number with expiration date and CVV code to The Gesneriad Society, Dept AVM, PMB 637, 1122 E Pike Street, Seattle, WA 98122 USA. New members receive a copy of "How to Know and Grow Gesneriads," two back issues and the next four quarterly issues of our journal Gesneriads, a package of mixed gesneriad seed, access to the world's largest source of gesneriad seed, and many other benefits.

Privacy Policy

Your privacy and the privacy of all ABS members or of those who contact us is of the highest priority. This privacy and terms of use statement explains what information we gather from you, how it may be used by us and how it is protected. If you have any questions, please contact us.

If you are an ABS member or request information from ABS, we use the information you submit to fulfill your requests (such as sending informational materials, fulfilling your order or responding to specific inquiries). We also may use information for purposes of the Society including providing names of ABS members to those wishing to start a branch in the ABS or in connection with internal communications (such as invitations to events). If you do not want your information shared, let our membership chairman know by email or phone. This information is used for Society-related contacts only. We will not knowingly collect or use personal identifying information from children younger than 18 without parental consent. If knowledge of any information from any child younger 18 is collected, we will immediately delete such information.

If you are a member of ABS or submit material to The Begonian, your information may be published in The Begonian either in association with the published material or in reporting business of the society including the directory on the inside back cover. If you submit material in any form including letters, articles, and photographs, it is assumed that these are submitted for publication unless you specifically request that material not be published. Be aware that it is the policy of ABS not to copyright material in The Begonian or restrict its further use so long as credit is given as to source.

There is a privacy policy specific to our web page on our website at www.begonias.org.

We do not otherwise sell, rent, exchange or disclose our client lists or information about our web site users or our members, except to the limited extent necessary to protect the rights, property and safety of our Society, our members, or others or to comply with applicable law. In the event of dissolution of the Society, all member data will be destroyed.

A Useful IDB Tip

By Freda Holley, Choudrant, LA

If you are ever discussing a plant in an email and don't have its photo, you can copy its ID from The International Database of the BEGONIACEAE or IDB (http://ibegonias.filemakerstudio.com.au/) as shown. You can then click on the green check mark in the right-hand column. It will take you to the plant's photo page. This works really well for a species with many varieties where you can just copy the page and capture access to all the forms.
